

The new NPQ framework provides a 'golden thread' throughout every stage of a teacher's career. Classroom teachers through to leaders of multiple schools will now build and develop their practice from the same evidence-based framework.

Under the previous framework, teachers had the opportunity to undertake an NPQ in middle leadership (NPQML). Now, they will have the choice of three new specialist NPQs to develop different aspects of their practice in teaching and leadership without moving away from what they love – teaching in the classroom.

- NPQ for Leading Behaviour and Culture
- NPQ for Leading Teaching
- NPQ for Leading Teacher Development

You can find out more about the specialist NPQs here: <https://www.ambition.org.uk/blog/six-opportunities-develop-your-teaching-and-leading-new-specialist-npqs/>

In partnership with Ambition Institute, we are proud to be delivering the new NPQ for Leading Teacher Development. In 12 months, participants will gain the knowledge to become teacher educators and successfully support fellow teachers to expand their skills.

Leading Teacher Development

At a time and pace that suits their existing timetable, those doing the training will learn:

- How to become expert teacher educators
- To become champions of quality teaching
- Make sure professional development in your school is focused on a shared responsibility for improving outcomes for all pupils
- Diagnose what teachers know and can do, starting professional development from that point and adapting the approach based on their developing expertise
- Help teachers improve through evidence-based professional development focused on improving classroom teaching
- Gain an understanding of what teachers have learned by reviewing patterns of performance over a number of assessments
- Develop and lead a team of colleagues who can facilitate a range of professional development approaches
- Contribute to a programme of professional development for mentors, trainees and early career teachers.

Assessment:

The assessment window starts at the end of the 12-month programme. During this time, participants will be given an eight-day window to sit an 'open book' style assessment in which participants respond to a short case study in no more than 1500 words.

There are two assessment windows every year, and participants can sit the assessment twice, if they need to. You need to pass the course to qualify for the NPQ accreditation.

To access the assessment delivery of the programme must have completed and participants must have attended 90% of the programme. Submissions will be marked using comparative judgement.

Results are issued in Spring 2023.
